Background and History...

Soon after opening its New York flagship in 1980, Warwick Hotels and Resorts opened its Parisian counterpart in the same year, the Warwick Paris located just off arguably one of the most famous avenues in the world.

An emblematic establishment of the Big Apple since 1926, the Warwick New York was built and made famous by William Randolph Hearst - an American businessman and media tycoon in the early twentieth century - for the love of his life, the Hollywood actress Marion Davies.

Since then, the hotel continues to host famous celebrities and has inevitably become a mythical icon in Manhattan, synonymous with New York glamour and understated indulgence.

Other hotels soon followed: in Europe, the Warwick Brussels overlooking the Grand Place; the renowned Hôtel Westminster on Rue de la Paix in Paris - the former residence of the Duke of Westminster - between Opera Garnier and Place Vendôme and Warwick Geneva which boasts magnificent views of Mont Blanc. Across the Atlantic, during the same period, WHR also saw Warwick Seattle, Warwick Melrose - Dallas and Warwick Denver join its collection.

Concurrently, resorts were being added to The Collection in the Pacific. The success of its first resort, the Warwick Fiji, encouraged the growth of additional resorts within The Collection.

Since then, WHR has continued to grow around the world in major key destinations such as London in January 2017 and is today proud of its portfolio of luxury establishments worldwide. More information on media.warwickhotels.com
